

Abortion affects every body.

For 50 years, Ipas has supported communities around the world to ensure access to abortion and contraception for all.

“

Abortion is not only a women's issue.

Elisa Vega Sillo is a nurse and spiritual leader. She participated in Ipas trainings on sexual and reproductive rights and has since been one of Bolivia's champions for abortion rights and law change.

Photo by Fatema Monir for Ipas

“

Ipas gave me the knowledge to make myself useful.

Ummay Roman Jannaty is an Ipas-trained health worker who provides family planning and abortion care to Rohingya refugees from Myanmar who live in Bangladesh’s sprawling refugee camps.

“

Working with youth is important because they are our future leaders.

Nelly Nyendwa is a volunteer at an Ipas-supported “youth-friendly corner.” At health centers across Zambia’s capital, youth-friendly corners have offered young people a private space to receive sexual and reproductive health information from their peers.

Ipas photo

When we protect reproductive freedom, everyone benefits.

Over 50 years, Ipas has developed a comprehensive approach to expanding abortion access that harnesses all sectors of society. We've trained, supported, and partnered with activists, health providers, educators, community leaders, lawmakers, youth groups and more—and we bring their collective strength and wisdom to bear in everything we do.

Photo by Martha Tadesse for Ipas

Our impact

Last year alone, here's what we achieved:

+13K health workers trained

+450K people received abortion care at Ipas-supported clinics

2.1M people received contraception at Ipas-supported clinics

77 policy changes to expand abortion access in 15 countries

1.4K access points supported for self-managed abortion with pills

120 positive public statements on abortion access in 18 countries

Our powerful global network of experts and activists is making a difference every day.

When you support Ipas, you help fuel a global network. You ensure we can take both immediate actions to protect abortion access today and invest in the long-term strategies and movement building needed to ensure abortion rights for the next generation.”

—Anu Kumar, Ipas President and CEO

We've made incredible progress in 50 years, but there's still so much to do.

Join us in protecting every body's right to reproductive freedom.

www.ipas.org/Everybody

Ipas50

DONATE NOW

